Peace Officers with the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) receive a salary that is very competitive with other law enforcement agencies. In addition, the salary is one of the highest paid to Peace Officers in the United States. While in the apprenticeship program, Peace Officers can expect a salary adjustment of 5% every 6 months until the maximum of the range is reached. Thereafter, Peace Officers can expect to receive a salary adjustment of 5% every 12 months until the top of that salary range has been reached.

Peace Officers receive health, dental, and vision benefits. Peace Officers also earn vacation leave, sick leave, and holiday credits, and may be eligible for special educational and physical fitness incentive pay. (Additional Benefits Information)
